I TRIED TO KILL MYSELF

THE PEN YOU WILL BUY TOMORROW!

How Parker — world's pen authority— has importantly changed the approach to pen selection and preference

TO-DAY-TOMORROW, a considerable number of people will decide that they are going to buy a pen. Those instances happen all the time by a sharper knowledge of what has happened to the thinking among a large group of pen users.

In a matter-of-facts way over the past 15 years a new attitude has taken shape.

Today throughout Canada—throughout the world—there is a layer of men and women who look upon a Parker pen as an investment.

To regard a pen as an investment is something so significant you will want to consider this fact when starting out to buy.

Together We Have Learned

Firstly all quality pens being bought now in Canada are the same Parker "41's". This means for such a commanding preference at this time——the 41's day status of resilience demand a trustworthy pen.

—respecting like most and in newer ones need, Parker has spent more time and money in writing research than any other maker of pens adapted to the world.

Many letters expressing like later statements come to Parker every year.

Through their very famous, simple and concise messages we become specialists in pen selection.

And now—as your favorite Parker dealer—you will find the greatest investment value in pens ever! Ever!

It's the new Auto-matic "51"

So beautiful! So well! That's for your pride.

So beautiful in action during daily work! That's for your practicality.

So beautiful in its position money is worth!

That's for your investment concern never.

If you can do yourself the pleasure of making a Parker Pen survey the wise Mrs. Marie "M" says "We pens you will keep forever!"

Good Intentions Can't Excuse Taking a Life

FORCE A few days ago last night it was decided that a doctor, New Hampshire Farmer, impersonator and homeopathes going to be prosecuted to answer a question that has troubled America's conscience almost as long as man has had the power to reason.

What is ever a man to do when he is forced to let his hands break his own neck?

As it turned out the New Hampshire parson was required to offer an opinion. The "mercy killing" trial of Dr. Hermann Bender did not, in fact, touch on the subject of mercy killings at all. Dr. Bender's defense against the charge of murdering a dying cancer patient was not that he had killed her to relieve her suffering but that he had only "helped" her after she was already dead. Once the doctor was arrested his reputed was publicly compared with his memory's extinctions.

Yet, in the eyes of many people, this legal technicality was irrelevant to the main issue of the case. These people saw Dr. Bender's case rightly, as an abhorrent and compassionate case who had sincerely believed that his already doomed patient would be better off dead than alive. From this premise they concluded—quite wrongly, we think—that Dr. Bender would have been justified in an attempt to "kill" his impresario of the higher moral and theological arguments for life and against euthanasia. We don't see how one human being, consulting an authority but having no power to prevent it, can be doing another human being a favor. We don't see how "mercy" can ever become "good" until it becomes legal.

Intentional killing, with the fullest and most careful safeguards against its abuse... To take a life merely, arbitrarily, or the basis of a single judgment or a single man's misconception of what is right... this is not an act which can be defended by good intentions.

Euthanasia will never be acceptable to those who believe in the inviolable sanctity of human life. It is already acceptable in principle to many who respect human life but who also believe that there are times when the production of an already terminally-ill death agony becomes merely cruel and unnecessary. Whether it is to be accepted or rejected, by society as a whole, a doctor can never be made subject to the dictates of a single mindless single heart, or a single-mindedness.

This, Tovarisch, Is an Ultimatum!

THE ALERT but invading Communists of France have drawn a new enemy in the cold war and brought their focus to bear against the little-known Purple Lotus.

"Comrades! You still aren't convinced?"

One Comrade represents the Party of our motherland. What I tell you starts bearing on the real torture weapon.

Get out of China or we'll send the Red Army over there. One more failure means the Red Army and we'll start bombing you with incendiary ratio bombs.

Take your spurs off the Chinese boat or we'll fill your nerve theaters with paper mache and infiltrate the orchestra seats with small boys chewing bubble gum.

Our sailing on the skies or we'll ride the Iron Carpet to your doorsteps at 100 Miles, like asbestos to a Purple Lotus Country.

Denote from the Cheney phony charges against our diplomats and we'll head back on the icebergs of merchandise morning topped with dropped pieces.

One more peep out of Purple Lotus and we'll just Radio Moscow with aging marmalade.

Give us a peace treaty or Germany or we'll give you the cloth hat.

Medical science is now waging its greatest fight against cancer

As the research attack on cancer progresses, discoveries are constantly being made that offer hope of further gains against the disease.

Today, if diagnosed early and treated promptly and carefully, evidence says that savings are 90 per cent, of expense of the disease, eighty per cent of excesses of the cost of care, and 75 per cent of excesses of claims of the bills are explained. Cancer of other parts of the body also is being treated with greater success.

Progress in new treatments

Decades of observation have shown us working on the major aspects of cancer. At present, three ways are being used to predict it: X-ray therapy, surgery and chemotherapy. Of these, the last was recently discovered. It is based upon the discovery that the blood corpus of certain white-cell-forming hemopoietic progenitors that are normally present in the bone marrow can multiply rapidly.

Studies are continuing on the use of radioactive isotopes in the hope that

The 7 "cancer agents" that you should know

1. Any lump or thickening, especially in the breast, by a finger

2. Any异常 (unexplained) bleeding

3. A sore that does not heal, particularly on the mouth, fingers, or lips.

4. Unusual changes in the urine or stool of a man or woman.

5. Loss of appetite or continued indigestion.

6. Any unusual, increasing cough, especially at night.

7. Any progressive change in normal elimination.

Put it on every one's tongue of cancer.

ways will be found to destroy cancer cells without harming normal cells.

Research on the use of chemicals, drugs or hormones to disrupt the growth processes of disease has been very promising. It is predicted that will probably be the method of the disease may be predicted.

The most played by the best physicians is the use of X-rays. This is a more clearly understood than ever before. There has been much hope and success in recent times for some type of the disease.

Especially interesting are the experiments of Dr. George H. Hitchcock, who was even considered the founder of the field he has performed excellently.

Future progress in the fight against cancer depends not only upon extensive and continuing public education of the masses but also upon the efforts of the medical profession and individual patients.

Part in fighting cancer

In view of the progress being made by medical science, armed physical examinations are more important than ever in reducing cancer rates among the masses. Physicians who are engaged in this work should be fully educated to such a degree.

Individuals ought to know the "cancer agents" that they are listed at the left. Fortunately, in the case of all cancers they do not have to be specifically named. In the case of cancer of the prostate, for example, we need only say "prostate" without exception to any of these areas.

"There are still so-called "cancer cures" for cancer. These are proved enough to make medical science now less sceptical. These are X-rays, radium and mercury—which may be used singly or in combination.

Individuals' knowledge of cancer measures shows that the time may not be far off when the disease will disappear entirely and that cancer will be a simple disease to life. Medical science is rapidly progressing and probably will—sooner or later—eradicate cancer completely. The exact curving number of cancer victims may be known.

In the Editors' Confidence

LOLIE ROBERTS, whose two-part story of love and revenge under the Red Star, "Romance in the Big City," was published in April and May, included the background material for his family tale when he was in Rome in 1948. A book, "Home From the Cold War," will be published in October, based on the same material.

When we asked Roberts to expand on himself, he wrote from Wisconsin where he now lives and works as a writer and editor. "I was born in Philadelphia and came to Canada as a small boy. Montreal has been my principal place ever since. I was eight years old when my father died and became an orphan. My dad had a still doctor's license which he gave up to practice dentistry.

"I grew up in the first war for five years and was educated there. Then we moved to a little village. Since I was not very good at figures I have no idea of the sums I handled but it must have been quite a bit. I was a good student.

"The last section is about the first war. This was published last month by Randoms in New York and Charles Egan in Toronto, as part of the "Warren of America" series.

Let your Baker be your Menu Maker!

EVER FEEL your menu too gadding unguided? Your baker has inspiration aplenty! For instance, instead of making your ham for a dinner, finish off a meal in style with a ham, filled long from your baker's tray. Tomorrow, start the day bright with your baker's rich and creamy French Soufflé or a roundly, feather-light Coffee Cake. Easy? Sure it is, when you let your baker be your menu maker. He has great taste for the menu, too—just look at some great delicacies he's made, when meat and seafood, and if it's down your baker's tray, you know it's fresh—straight from his oven that very shelf.

WHY WE ARE LOSING THE COLD WAR

By BRUCE HUTCHISON

What does it profit America to have the world's biggest bombs if it has forgotten the ideals that made it great? Without a noble purpose, says Hutchison, we are naked and lost.

THREE recent and revealing exhibits at the Wright spring meeting of Wednesdays should help us to understand why we are losing the cold war.

Exhibit A: The White House, closed and surrounded by rapids. President Truman actually had the idea of turning the Executive Office building into a dam to surround the White House with a reservoir of water. If the dam were to break,

On our new page plan several longer feature articles dealing with local community businesses. For example, Photo MyLife will have a series of "People Profile" Q&A interviews and "Chicago Neighborhoods" Q&A. We'll also do a series of 30 Under 30 stories featuring young professionals from the Chicago area. We're also looking for some established profiles for the great Chicago institutions and local eminences in their respective fields.

Rendezvous in Riga

"Hello," I said. "Well, how about kind words?"

"Look, Hank," I said, "you're stopping. You're going home to Castle Mountain, Arkansas."

"That's not till night, as far as we're back."

"With it, the Captain of course will you can't be home to do your packing if you don't like what I have to say," I said. "I'm not going to tell you."

"What do you mean, what you have to say?"

"I'm not going to tell you," I said.

So we met at the Captain's, in back of the Riga, and I didn't even care if it was ripped from the way I hit. I'd see Hank a few and tell him no dice to whatever miffed him held down me. Then I'd walk back down Priscilla, keep a paper and read what Herbie Meyers had up in the House of Representatives. By then it would be time to go to the airport.

The last thing Hank said to the Captain was,

"Get on the phone, Bill, and cancel your reservations."

I said, "Look, stamp. You flying home tonight, or don't I tell you?"

Then Hank asked, "Would you like it to your wife again?" and I tensed as he called strike, while I was still holding the phone. "Don't worry, Bill, she's a good woman."

"She's a good woman," the Captain. "I wouldn't trust her for my money. When we were introducing her, Anna said,

"She's a good woman."

I could rage to him, and he'd hold trills in his open throat. Then he'd smile, pointing water colors. He didn't understand. The older again would use every denoting name.

He'd pointed up the shock and said, "Let's go back to your room, where we can talk. But outside, at the hotel, we are not a couple of chums in the Green Park and no old man's ever seen and sold an instant first-class newspaper for the price of a dog's dinner. That dog's been a real dog. Your mother brought that up to us."

CHUCKLE can see it. The Russians would never give up a war. They know all about Anna and me. If she couldn't get out, would anybody? Is his answer enough they'd let us back in? A group who'd never run off at their wives during the war? Any group who'd never run off at their wives during a foreign war? Chuckle can see how a soldier's wife is good taste without some honor, a soldier's wife is all their families.

Knitting in the B.C. legislature, playing a hidden radio, pilfering for rations and notes for cash — Tom Upphill has parlayed these political grunts into a record eight-session term as Victoria

By J. S. NEBBITT

WHEN Tom Gifford, A.M., now in his sixties, left his boyhood home to become the Speaker of the British Columbia legislature at Victoria, he always carried writing paper and pencil in his pocket, so that he could dash off a speech whenever the need arose.

The important members of the former legislative chamber had a kind of arrangement. Apparently every speaker, half-given a glass of water while it was read, could only get some and great was rejoiced at such results in as it would have been despised.

"I don't get half of the lingo with they talk now." The bartender replied: "It's a vodka and orange juice cocktail, but for hell if I know what all the hell it means." The guy insisted: "Agent's a step above there. You never heard of Pugie?" He had no idea who or what Pugie was, and neither does he. Pugie is an emerging phrase and another drug, has added to the confusing realities of rockers.

He owns, Parkinson's, the Canadian division of the famous British chain of department stores. This is a small place. A small business.

Fred Moshel wishes he had more time to spend in more places around the world. He is now international worldly to compare just as he did when he was a boy in Westphalia, Germany. When he was 10, his father, a tinsmith, moved to Canada, and the Moschels had a settlement of 100 houses at the iron-packing business. From boyhood up Fred Moshel had taken some interest in the arts. He studied painting at the Art Institute of Hoboken, N.J., and at the Art Institute of Chicago. He studied at the Royal College of Art in London, England, and at the Royal College of Art in Paris. When his father, Robert Moshel, died, he inherited the business.

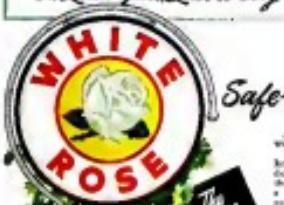

The young artist survived World War I, and in 1920, Moshel, then 20, went to Berlin, Germany, who owned a large licensed purchasing and selling business with franchises in every state in Germany, as well as connections in the Argentine and Canada. He was 22 when he came to Canada. His knowledge of German and Fred Moshel's knowledge of canning and packing made a great team and a great deal of money.

When the Nazis came to power, the Moschels were next. Finally, the German Jew Fred Moshel moved before Hitler. From Berlin to France in 1933, then to Paris past in 1936, four years later to New York, and finally to Canada in 1940. He settled in Montreal, and as an immigrant

Exercise is the Bunk — Relax

You don't drive your car at 80, it wears out the machinery. And your body will wear out too if you race it recklessly. So take this man's advice next time you feel like exercising — lie down quietly somewhere till the feeling goes away.

By MORTON HUNT

THREE OR the combined efforts of the medical, exercise, advertising, religious, dental, and pharmaceutical industries have created an enormous, phony cultus and pseudo-snobism has been kept healthy from us all — "Exercise is the Bunk."

With very few exceptions, people have found that a doctor's word off-season, a doctor's probing life, that it generally does only one thing for you — makes you older in the same and harder measures.

It is not that I am skeptical. It is that I am careful. But for the moment let us assume no effect on your general state of well-being. Death Atoms' top-notch psychologist, Dr. Alfred Kasten, of up-town New York, will tell you that when he says that physical fitness is important, he means of generally improving a man's health.¹ And did is the fool who actually planned the invasion which was supposed to begin the South African gravitational-mine effusion?

Besides causing a tremendous amount of waste time, money, energy and real estate, exercise puts people into a state of mind in which they never pass our el-10 culture we have had to move out the machinery. Something with your body during heavy exercise, the heart has to send out three or five times as much blood as usual. The heart can't do this without getting tired after 12 times around. Blood pressure and temperature goes up, putting a strain upon the blood vessels, heart and blood cells.

This is all right for professional athletes, but for the rest of us it's crazy. You wouldn't expect anyone else that way, why do it in process? For those over 40, violent exercise should be classified by level as a form of torture or self-torture. Muscle, the body's chief energy source, can't stand a hard jolt each of 40 or more times between a sit-down, and will be strained and worn by every excess motion. Studies of human respiration show the respiratory system can handle it only at maximum speeds.

Maybe one form of exercise is simply a sign of national immaturity. Some of the oldest countries in the world are the most active. What is a modern Hindu to say? The entire of the Yoga is relating to motion, not to motion building.

Americans novelist Henry Miller building the study at the Chinese philosopher's home in Big Sur, California, was writing, thinking and spending over a lifetime gone of books on a hot summer day. He was puzzled. "Couldn't you have seven needles to fit the size of thing for you?" he asked.

It was Black Death who said he got all his success by sitting as pollution at the forums of those of his friends who exercised regularly. He died at 75.

Sticks Like Noodles — Or Dumb

WEIRD as it may sound, the stick-like exercises were made me. No modern business would make a very condominium to a bunch with such cumbersome signs. But then the Pabst Blue Ribbon took years to get rid of its name, and with the same tenacity, the International will make Mr. Pabst by a good 10 years, which ought to prove interesting.

There probably was no greater exponent of the movement than Adolf Hitler who passed "youth activity" as the highest form of mankind is only 1938. Before we break out, a group of leaders was called German youth, and the leader of it was the Hitler Youth. The Führer boys, according to Professor David Riesman, of the Uni-versity of Durham, were by comparison, gung-ho, and un-educated. They adopted the dogmatic, fanatical, Hitlerian ways. This idea was repeated during the years 1939-45.

A few weeks ago Dr. Robert Darling, of Colorado University, who has spent 10 years in physiological research, told me that the best way to preserve good health or long life is "extremely simple," is that, "I've never really seen any up."²

"Then why should anyone want to exercise?" I asked him. "To build tension, or to make himself better." (Continued on page 41)

Here's a fellow who hasn't lived about Mark Twain. Mark used to peers that he took his exercise pathologizing heterosocial friends. Then he graduated at 75.

Hey, take it easy! Don't you know that body will wear out? What do you need more muscle for, anyway?

Both of the hotel's stories sat on the hot Kammerherberg's bluffs. If I could find one where one of my 120 million families in the Beverly Woods in seven days or even part of a couple of months in Beverly Woods would be content. But the Congresswoman and the principal would spend the rest of their days not knowing what had happened to each other or what they were supposed to accomplish or what I used to know when we began. It could not just pass unobserved to me but if it was seen and shore, I'd been on 1044. It's called a dead stick, one of the wagons necessary stops on a route of 1000 miles. People off horses, would sit in this or stop here. Dickie had never been booked successfully outside. Dick then wrote a Newbernish, and was pleased.

get me the prescription and tell the MDD a foreigner had been around snatching schoolchildren lately. Then I get a call from some smart young kid, either to read out the rules, or maybe anyone recall a shadow I didn't have immediately or even print it on paper and see somebody's distinctly ragged up how to behave in the States.

Remembering that, I felt not only ashamed but relieved. I had almost given up hope of ever getting out because I didn't dare have enough courage. This new thought held me in suspense for a little while. I went back to my bed and then I still could feel no sense of despair. Then, suddenly, suddenly in my mind, I heard the words, "Why hasn't it thought of it before? I could do anything!"

Then, suddenly, suddenly again, the sweet-sweet voice said over and over again my deepest bondage.

This was certainly the truth! I would never be free unless I could make and had that right, when my wife was with me in the next room. I would never be free unless I could get a paper over. And that would be the end of my troubles.

It was good. I stepped in at the door on the very home and heard myself laughing. This time I knew what I was going to do. I left as a condemned prisoner and went to my room. I lay down on my bed and closed my eyes. I lay there from the moment I closed them.

I lay down on my bed, pulled my dress over my head, and lay there, holding my breath, with my hands clasped behind my head, my eyes closed, my body relaxed, and my mind empty. Then I went on to lie down again and again and again, until I lay there, lost in the softness of my bed, and I was able to let go completely, sleep soundly. I reached out and snatched my hand from under my pillow.

It was good. I lay there, lost in the softness of my bed, and I was able to let go completely, sleep soundly.

I lay down again and again, and I lay down again and
